

TINLEY LIONS FETE BOWLING LEAGUE AT GALA PROGRAM

The largest gathering of Lion Club members outside of Charter and Laries Nights, of the Tinley Park Lions Club was held Monday night in Andres Hall, when the local Lions Club fete the Tinley Park Bowling League which was sponsored by the Lions Club.

The League consists of six teams and has played in the Homewood Bowling Alleys since last fall. The League started out with twenty bowlers and now has a membership of 30. All of the men are enthusiastic about bowling. The season closed last week and the Lions Club tendered the bowlers a special "entertainment and feed" while the prize money of the various teams was divided.

The teams have shown some excellent players and the interest in bowling is getting stronger right along. Mr. Hartman, manager of the Homewood Bowling Alleys donated $15 toward the prize money. The total cash prizes for each team was as follows:

Go Getters	$46.30
Ramblers	46.63
Whizzers	32.13
Corn Huskers	26.33
Hay Shakers	45.90
Do Littles	30.33

The Bowling League of Tinley Park elected the following officers: President, Clyde Rice; Vice-President, Joe Milles; Sec. and Treas. E. E. Anderson; assistant Sec. and Treas. C. Nieman.

Both Mr. Anderson and Mr. Nieman were presented with cartons of cigars and cigarettes in recognition of the excellent service they have rendered the Bowling League.

The Lions Club did things up just right as per usual. Two long tables decorated with the Lions cubs and flowers formed the festal board at which the members of the League and the Lions Club enjoyed a delightful spread, followed with ice cream, cake, orangeade and cigars. Lion Fred Goebel bottled some orangeade in cute souvenir bottles specially for the occasion and they made a hit.

Various members of both organizations were called upon by Paul Rauhoff, president of the Lions Club for remarks which were cheerfully given.

Rudolph Hug, noted local speaker did full honors to a humorous and yet a dignified speech. Mr. Hug in his pleasing manner of delivery, said there are two salient factors for all clubs to observe, and one of them is that if religion and politics enter in the club room door, organization flees out of the window. In addition he called attention to the fact that with the rapid development of Tinley Park, the local school is proving adequate to take care of all the new pupils being enrolled and addition will have to be built to the present school house or else a new school will have to be provided. The matter is to be considered and later recommendations will be made to the school board by the business men and the various local organizations as to which course to pursue.

President Rauhoff gave the editor of the Tinley Park Times and the News-Bulletin a special puff for the constructive work he has done thru the columns of these papers for Tinley Park. Editor Semmler made a brief and appropriate response.

Frankfort Gets Praise For Its Aviation Aid

Aviators flying over the village of Frankfort can read the name of the village which has been painted on the bulk plant of the Standard Oil company.

A certificate of recognition, issued by the Daniel Guggenheim fund, and signed by Colonel Lindbergh has been sent to Mayor George Letts of Frankfort.

The Standard Oil Company, with city and village officials thruout Illinois, is interested in marking every town for aviators so that they may know the territory they are flying over.

Towns in three thousand communities in which the Standard Oil Company of Indiana operates are to be painted on their buildings.

The certificate reads: "Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics. This is to certify that Frankfort has completed the work of identification for the service of aerial navigation thus contributing to the establishment of a nationwide system of transportation by air. In recognition of this achievement this certificate is presented to Frankfort, Illinois by the directors of the fund, Harry F. Guggenheim, president, Charles A. Lindbergh."

Chicken Thieves Busy At Tinley

Cars Crash Into Ligh Poles; Cripple Electrical Service

fort were without electric light and power Wednesday afternoon for a few hours as the result of an accident at Cass and Herkimer streets in Joliet. An auto had collided with

New Lenox, Mokena and Frank a Public Service light pole, snapping off the pole and pulling down the wires. Shortly after service was restored another car hit a pole located along the side of the New Lenox road and service was again interrupted for an hour.

Play Presented By Orland Park Students, A Hit

The students of the Orland Park High School were greeted with an overwhelming audience when the curtain rose at exactly 8 p. m. The auditorium was crowded to the very limit. Never before had these amateur players witnessed such a thrill as when they saw their parents and friends before them. Every muscle was intent to hear every word and to see every action.

The play had been chosen by the faculty with the utmost care and no detail was left undone to make it both entertaining and colorful for the occasion. Every character had really lived his part during the past four weeks of practice. There was a great deal of dramatic ability portrayed.

Mr. Sims, played by James Franks was the typical old farmer considerate of his daughter Sally played by Dorothy Homerding. He was interested in her welfare and determined that she should receive a square deal. No one could have carried the part any better than Dorothy. In fact she is deserving of a great deal of credit for the success of the play.

Who would ever think of Rudolph Bayer taking the part of "Hobo", but he seemed to know just how to do it. Of course he was right at home with a group of coeds such as we have in our school. We only wish we had a great many more.

Many a good laugh was forthcoming when Adolphus ("Red") Roy Newton appeared as "hurryin' as fast as I can". He seemed to have an endless number of jokes stored away in his old red top. No sooner had he spilled one wise crack when another was ready to take its place.

Prof. Crockett was none other than Arthur Brandt. Anyone would think him very sober but in reality Art is very jolly. If (Marvin Marshall) played by Alvin Uthe had not had been the young student minister from Blake University serving in Mountain Hill perhaps we would never have heard of Sally or cousin Susie Johnson (Marie DuPont) who that that her Johnnie Johnson (Robert Uthe) was "jes wonderful". Miss Weaver played by Mabel Breitbarth acted her part in keeping with a matron in any dining hall. Had Mabel been anywhere else but in Orland we would never have known her.

Music, too, had its part on the program for the Ukulele Club and Boys Trio played several selections.

Mokena Not In Favor Of Day Light Saving Time

At the meeting of the Mokena village council Wednesday evening, alderman John Balaz sought to introduce a motion that Mokena vote to go on Daylight Saving Time in connection with the Cook County towns, but the council decided to defer action on this measure until Joliet votes on the same question in the near future.

Tinley Park Post Has A Birthday

Tinley Park Post No. 615 was one year old Tuesday, April 29. Its members believe it is a very lusty infant. A brief resume of its activities will, no doubt, be of some interest to the public.

The American Legion has several aims. The chief one is service—service to the sick and crippled buddies, service to the community, state and nation. It is needless to state that Legionnaires believe thoroly in being good citizens.

Tinley Park Post has done several things along the line of community service. It has sponsored a Boy Scout Troop. It has installed 81 street flags. Rain or shine, the Legionnaires turn out on patriotic holidays and put up the flags. The Post has also been entrusted with the village flag in the park. The Post has co-operated loyally with all other organizations in the village in any worth while undertaking. A flag pole has been donated to the public school. The Post has been generous in donating the use of its hall for public school entertainments. One member of the Post is a school director. The Legion takes an active part in all community affairs.

Fortunately, service work in the usual sense of the word, has been unnecessary among the members. They are all big, husky he-men, in good health, and able to work. However, those less fortunate have not been forgotten. Several visits have been made to the Convalescent Camp at Orland Park and appropriate gifts have been given to the boys there.

The success of the Legion depends so much on the number of members and their activity. Tinley Park Post has won many honors during the 1930 membership campaign. It was the first Post in the 4th District and are the first in the State of Illinois to attain by Dec. 1st a 1930 membership equal to or greater than its 1929 membership. It was the first Post in the district to reach its quota and the first to go over its quota. It now stands 2nd in the district with 146 per cent of its 1929 membership. For this it has received citations from state and national headquarters, a prize of $15 and the privilege of having its Commander and Adjutant wear 3 gold stars on their caps.

Unlike many small Posts, Tinley Park has participated actively in District, County and State Legion affairs. Some of its members attend every meeting of the District and County Councils. It was ably represented at the State convention. Some of the leaders in Legion affairs have been guests of the Post and more are scheduled to come.

Orland P. T. A. Sponsors Health Program May 8

The next meeting of the Orland Park P. T. A. will be held Thursday evening, May 8th and will be dedicated to "Health for our Children". A program along this line is being arranged and a speaker prominent in school and health circles is promised by President Cooper. All members are urged to attend.

Mrs. George Cox, President Elect is busy on the job of appointing committees for the coming year, while it is a little premature, we believe she has outlined a strenuous year for herself, her officers and her committees.

More Wolf Road Right Of Way Signed; May Have To Condemn Some Land

The second batch of right of way papers for Wolf Road from the Cook and Will County Line south thru Mokena were released by the county engineer, Glenn Fletcher last week, and a second meeting of the right of way committee was held in the Mokena school auditorium Saturday afternoon.

Notices of the meeting had been sent to a number of Chicago people who own property along Wolf Road and quite a number of them were on hand ready to sign. Those who were ready to sign up for right of way frontage were:

Enos Shaw, Mrs. Elfrieda DeSoo, Frank McPhearn, Mr. Lesenfeld, Edwin Berg, Mr. and Mrs. John McCord and A. L. Pitts.

H. S. Schiek, Fred Brown, Chester Gorney and Anton Nelson have joined the objectors side and refuse to sign up for the present at least.

All the sidewalks in the village will have to be moved five feet on each side of the highway. All light and telephone poles will have to be moved as well as some hedge. Difficulty may be experienced in this direction. Some owners along Wolf Road are expecting big pay for damages from the county and are not satisfied with offers made.

The county engineer's office is busily engaged finishing up the balance of the right of way papers, including the right of way thru the Cleveland farm. The papers are to be ready within the next two weeks, according to county engineer, Glen Fletcher. At that time the right of way committee will seek to get all the papers signed up.

If the majority of the property owners along Wolf Road sign up for the needed frontage, the minority objectors will be visited and a final effort made to get their signatures and if this move fails, then condemnation proceedings will be instituted against them.

On the other hand if the objectors are in the majority, then Wolf Road will be dropped from the Will County road building program until such time as the owners of property elect to sign up. In this event it is doubtful when Wolf Road will be finished in Will County.

It is up to the progressive people of the community to get the doubtful ones lined up right so the paving of Wolf Road can be made a reality this year. There is no place for quitters now and all must boost to get Wolf Road thru.

In all probability it may take six weeks yet before the right of way is entirely signed up for at the present rate at which signatures are being received.

Notice To Vehicle Owners

Vehicle owners of the Village of Tinley Park are hereby notified to apply for Village Vehicle tag at the office of the Village Clerk.

The license was due Jan. 1, 1930 and those who have not obtained the Vehicle tag are almost 5 months delinquent.

If this matter is not given prompt attention it will be necessary to place the collection of the Vehicle license in the hands of the Police Department.

By order of Village Board of Tinley Park, Cook County, Ill.

Find 7 Wolves On Farm Near The Wolf Road

Quite a sensation was created last Friday when the news spread that seven wolf cubs had been discovered on the Krapp farm north of Mokena along Wolf Road. The farm is tenanted by Howard Marti.

The baby wolves were first seen among stubble in a corn field sunning themselves. Investigation revealed two holes in the ground. One hole contained six cubs and about a block away another hole yielded one lone wolf cub.

The little cubs were placed in a galvanized tank and a covering placed over same so they could not get out. They are being fed bread, milk and meat and are said to be husky eaters. They appear quite tame, only one of the cubs growl when being handled.

The father and mother wolves are shot to be in the vicinity, altho they have not been seen in the day time. Last Saturday night when Mr. Marti returned to the farm after a trip to Mokena, he heard quite a commotion around the home of the cubs, but on coming up closer, could not see a sign of the wolf parents whom he thought were the cause of the excitement.

There is a state bounty of $20 per head on wolves and if this bounty is paid for this litter, it will mean a tidy little sum of money.

The wolves have been the center of attraction and last Sunday over 200 persons visited the Marti farm to see the little wolves.

The section adjacent to Mokena and Orland has been visited by wolves quite frequently during the past year or two and it is that the wolf family must have a rendezvous in some of the timber land and gullies in this section.

Mokena Sewer Project Being Pushed Ahead

At the meeting of the Mokena Local Board of Improvements Wednesday evening, J. V. Hall residing on Wolf road north of the village, asked the board to take part of the subdivision in which his property is located off the proposed sanitary sewer map, as the sewer would not benefit the subdivision at this time, but Mayor Harry Mall said that no changes can be made in the sewer plans at this time and that the Local Board of Improvements is going ahead with the present plans. Mayor Mall said if the property owners want to knock the sewer out they will have a chance to voice their objections in the County Court.

Efforts are now being made to buy the needed land from the Ball or farm for the treatment plant site.

Famous AMERICAN MOTHERS

Sarah Bush Lincoln

Mary, the Mother of Washington

Mary Ball Washington Monument

Nancy Hanks Lincoln Monument

AY 11 of this year is Mother's day, a day for honoring our mothers, not only those who are here to receive our love but also those who are no longer with us. It is also a day for paying tribute to those mothers of the past who gave to a nation its great men. In virtually every case the fame of their sons has so far transcended their own that they are but little known, even though those sons have been the first to acknowledge their indebtedness to their mothers for whatever elements of greatness they themselves possessed.

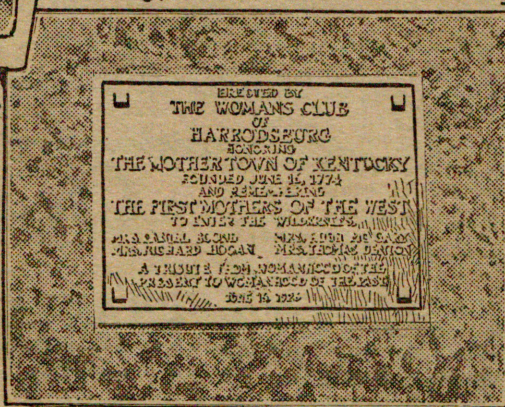

Such was the case with the first great American, George Washington, and his mother, Mary Ball Washington. In an address to "the Worshipful Mayor and Commonalty of the Corporation of Fredericksburg" in 1760 he thanked them for the "honorable mention which is made of my revered mother, by whose maternal hand (early deprived of a Father) I was led to manhood." When she died in 1789 and congress passed resolutions of sympathy, his reply contained this tribute to her: "I attribute all of my success in life to the moral, intellectual and physical education which I received from my mother."

Even though that statement is closely akin to Lincoln's famous tribute to his mother, "God bless my mother. All that I am or hope to be I owe to her," it is doubtful if there was the warmth of feeling in Washington's words that there were in Lincoln's. For the truth of the matter is that there was never the close mother-and-son attachment between George Washington and Mary Ball Washington that there was between Abraham Lincoln and Nancy Hanks Lincoln, or even between the Great Emancipator and his stepmother, Sarah Bush Johnston Lincoln.

Left motherless at the age of thirteen, Mary Ball was married to Augustine Washington at twenty-two and gave the name of George to her first-born in honor of her guardian and girlhood benefactor, Maj. George Eskridge. That she was a stern parent seems to be the unanimous verdict of all of the early Washington biographers. Of her, Lawrence Washington of Chotauk, once said: "I was often there with George—his playmate, schoolmate and young man's companion. Of the mother I was ten times more afraid than I ever was of my own parents. She averted me in the midst of her kindness, for she was indeed truly kind. I have often been present with her sons, proper tall fellows, too, and we were all as mute as mice; and even now, when time has whitened my locks, and I am the grandparent of a second generation, I could not behold that remarkable woman without feelings it is impossible to describe. Whoever has seen that awe-inspiring air and manner, so characteristic in the Father of His Country, will remember the matron, as she appeared when the presiding genius of her well-ordered household, commanding and being obeyed."

Because she was a stern parent, it has pleased some biographers of Washington to paint her as a Spartan mother. But this role did not include sending him forth to war with the classical injunction about "returning home with your shield or upon it," for we have the evidence of George Washington Parke Custis that she had two great fears, one of war and the other of lightning, and the evidence of contemporary documents that she persistently discouraged Washington in his military ambitions. Much of the latter has been brought to light by a modern biographer, Rupert Hughes, whose honest effort to learn and present the whole truth about Washington has brought down upon him so many accusations of being a deliberate idol-smasher since the first volume of his life of Washington was published by William Morrow and company four years ago.

In that volume he says of Mary Ball Washington, "While she has been the victim of almost as much deification as George—she has been set next to the mother of Christ—she seems to have been a terrifyingly strict mother, and not to have shared George's ideals of rebellion. . . . Few women have ever had such rhetoric of adulation heaped upon them, and Washington is quoted as saying that he owed all he was to his mother. But it is a cruel truth that she was chiefly remarkable as a very human, cantankerous old lady who, from being a fond taskmaster in her early motherhood, evolved into a trial for everybody.

"Mother Town" Tablet Harrodsburg, Ky.

"These are the abundantly supported facts, and there is no excuse for the maudlin perversion of the truth; yet the picturesque little old woman struggling with unusual hardships and her own traits should have all the sympathy in the world. It cannot be comfortable to be the mother of an arch-rebel."

In a later volume he says of her: "She was a difficult mother, though he was a devoted son. . . . Mary's name appears incessantly in Washington's account books and diaries. He took good care of her business for her, visited her with filial regularity, and paid her profound respect, saying at the last: 'I attribute all of my success in life to the moral, intellectual and physical education which I received from my mother.' So, even though we cannot think of Washington's mother as an outstanding example of the warm, gentle mother-love which we associate with the idea back of Mother's day, surely the result of the 'moral, intellectual and physical education' which she contributed to the making of the great character that was the Father of His Country should be enough to insure for Mary Ball Washington the lasting gratitude of this nation.

While there do not exist, and probably never have, any such contemporary records, as in the case of Washington and his mother, to show the closeness of the bond between Nancy Hanks Lincoln and the son that was born to her on February 12, 1809, yet there is a wealth of tradition, reliable enough to warrant its acceptance, about the tender and deep love that was theirs. One of the leading Lincoln scholars, Dr. William E. Barton, has aptly called her "a backwoods madonna," and in his book, "The Women Lincoln Loved," published by the Bobbs-Merrill company, he presents these glimpses of mother and son:

Southern Indiana was then a wild region, and the settlements back of the Ohio river were few and sparse. There were at first no regular church services, no physicians, no schools. Perhaps Thomas Lincoln did not regret the absence of schools so much as Nancy did. There is no reason to believe that he opposed such education as his children were able to secure, but apparently the mother was more intent on the securing of an education for her children than was the father.

Abraham Lincoln was old enough now to look with more possibility of appreciation on this mother of his, and to estimate somewhat her qualities. She was now approaching the age of thirty-five. She was above medium height and had a slight stoop as though predisposed to consumption. She weighed about a hundred and thirty pounds. Her complexion was dark, and her face was thin and sallow. Her forehead was unusually high, and all her relatives commented on this feature of her appearance as belonging to and exhibiting her intellectual nature. She was usually cheerful, but her face in repose was sad. At times she displayed a marked tendency to mirth, but she had moods of melancholy.

Abraham had a boy's limitation of judgment; perhaps he did not appreciate these qualities so fully in his youth as he did later, but we have no reason to suppose that he was wholly blind to them. She was a good mother to him, and he knew it. She was ambitious for him, and desired that he should have the opportunities which both she and her husband had missed.

He loved his mother while she lived, and he loved her memory afterward. It was a pathetic memory, and had in it elements concerning which he was properly reticent; but as to his inheritance through her of the qualities which he deemed to be some of the best within him, he spoke with deep feeling, "God bless my mother. All that I am or hope to be I owe to her." Although in this utterance, her son spoke of the mental traits he thought himself to have inherited from her, rather than her direct influence over him, it was of her mind and character he spoke when he said that however unpromising her early surroundings might have been "she was highly intellectual by nature, had a strong memory, accurate judgment, and was cool and heroic."

If Abraham Lincoln received from his mother a rich heritage of qualities which contributed to his greatness, that greatness also owes much to another woman who bore the name of Lincoln. She was Sarah Bush Johnston, widow of a Daniel Johnston, a Kentucky pioneer, whom Thomas Lincoln married in 1819. Already the mother of three children, marriage added to her responsibilities that of the rearing of Tom Lincoln's motherless son and daughter. Of her Barton writes:

Sally Bush was not slow to discover in her new son qualities which were not present in the son who was of her own flesh and blood. With no word of disparagement of her own boy, she never failed to praise and encourage Abraham. The time had come when Thomas Lincoln and his son did not understand each other any too well. The boy had shot up marvelously in stature, and the changes of adolescence wrought in him unaccountable transformations. He became dreamy and at times unsocial. There were within him the stirrings of strange ambitions which did not please his father. . . . Thomas Lincoln now and then became angry at his boy's perverseness.

In this situation the mother often understood the boy when the father does not. This fact is the basis of much silly sentimentality, and has become the occasion of a most unjust disparagement of fatherhood and a flabby and half-hypocritical adulation of motherhood. But the experience of the Lincoln household is not unique. Blessed is the boy who at such a time has a mother who understands him and is able to express a sympathy which the father perhaps does not know how to define or perhaps even to think necessary.

Such sympathy Abraham Lincoln found in his new mother. She encouraged his reading, and persuaded Thomas Lincoln to look upon it with favor. Sally Lincoln saw this raw-boned lad outstrip her own son, and was not jealous, but encouraged Abraham to persevere. So far as we have any data to serve as the basis of correct judgment, her influence on him was wholly good.

Year in and year out, through the long period of his late boyhood and young manhood, Abraham Lincoln saw and admired and loved this handsome, curly-haired new mother of his, and he carried into life a finer ideal of womanhood for what he discovered in her.

But great as was the contribution of these two pioneer mothers, who bore the name of Lincoln, to the building of the nation, they were by no means the only ones of their type who had a hand in that. In a little park in the city of Harrodsburg, Ky., stands a massive granite boulder upon which is a bronze tablet bearing these words: "Erected by the Woman's Club of Harrodsburg, honoring the Mother Town of Kentucky, founded June 16, 1774, and remembering the First Mothers of the West to enter the wilderness: Mrs. Daniel Boone, Mrs. Richard Hogan, Mrs. Hugh McGary, Mrs. Thomas Denton. A tribute from womanhood of the present to womanhood of the past. June 16, 1926."

The erecting of monuments to the pioneer mother has become a frequent occurrence in recent years in many parts of the country. Some of them are great statues which show what manner of women were these who pushed the frontier ever westward. But there are those who say that no more appropriate monument to the pioneer mother was ever erected than that which stands in Harrodsburg—its severe simplicity telling of the simplicity of their lives, its rugged granite and enduring bronze bespeaking those qualities which only the wives of a race of wilderness-breakers and the mothers of a race of nation-builders have.

When BABIES are upset

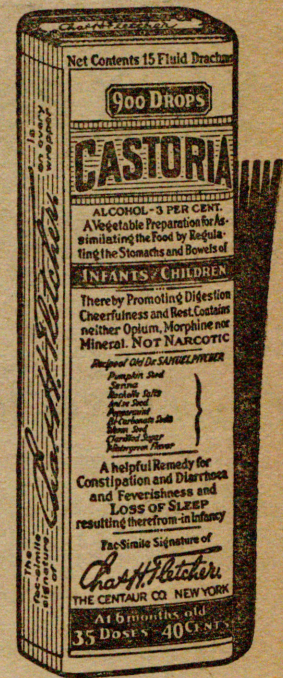

Baby ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea—a condition it is always important to check quickly. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready? There is nothing that can take the place of this harmless but effective remedy for children; nothing that acts quite the same, or has quite the same comforting effect on them.

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation.

The greatest prevailing illusion is chicken salad.

tion always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria; the genuine bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

The peanut vender is always working a shell game.

Old and young can take this family laxative; free trial bottle!

The next time you or the children need a laxative, try this famous doctor's prescription which aids the bowels without doing any harm. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, containing pure senna and laxative herbs, is effective in a gentle and helpful way. Its action is thorough, but it never weakens the bowels. It stimulates muscular action and is thus actually good for the system. So remember Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin when coated tongue, fetid breath, headaches, nausea, jaded appetite or biliousness tells the need of a thorough cleansing. Druggists keep it in big bottles, or write Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, Monticello, Ill., for a free trial bottle.

HENS SET HIGH EGG RECORD

Hens on test for egg production during March established new high records at the three poultry experimental farms the state conducts at Quincy, Kankakee and Murphysboro according to a compilation issued by Chief Poultryman E. G. Horner, in his monthly report to the director of agriculture, Stuart E. Pierson.

Five single comb Rhode Island Reds, owned by E. W. Mahood, of Webster Grove, Mo., on test at Murphysboro, set a new high mark in pen production for the American, Asiatic and English classes. The Missouri birds turned in an aggregate yield of 148 eggs out of a possible 155. This figure better than 95 percent production, and indicates that the Mahood "Reds", laid at the rate of 347 eggs per year.

The cup for the best pen in the Mediterranean class competition went to five White Leghorns owned by Dr. A. C. Murray & Sons, of Davenport, Iowa, competing at the Kankakee plant. They laid 147 eggs during the month.

At the three experimental farms combined, there were 17 birds with perfect scores -- 31 eggs in 31 days.

TO IMPROVE FAIR GROUNDS

Employment for about 200 men, and a payroll that will approximate $50,000 will result from the improvement program to be launched soon at the Illinois State Fairground at the instance of Gov. Louis L. Emerson.

Five big buildings are to be renovated at a total cost of almost $90,000 in accordance with plans that are being completed by C. Herrick Hammond, state architect, and Bryant E. Hadley, his assistant.

There will be reroofing, repainting, general construction and repair work on the Fair Ground buildings:

The Exposition Building, Fine Arts Building, Machinery Hall, the swine pavilion and the sheep pavilion. In addition, there will be extensive improvements in the racehorse stables and in the various shelter ways or covered walks about the grounds.

In appropriating expenditures for the betterment of conditions on the state fairgrounds, this season, the director of agriculture, the fair management and the state fair advisory board were charged by Governor Emerson to give their first attention to the preservation of the buildings that stand in need of repair. "Conserving the resources of the state," he said, "is the first essential of economy. Take care of the buildings so that the citizens of Illinois, for years, to come, may profit by their preservation. Additional construction can come later, when conditions justify expansion."

Plans for all the work laid out for this busy season at the fairgrounds involve the use of material that will reduce the subsequent maintenance expense to a minimum.

Primarily, the work will be replacing roofs that have got beyond repair. Wherever practical, the material to be used to cover the buildings mentioned will be asbestos shingles - the type that was used last season to reroof the coliseum and the gigantic cattle barn adjoining it. The same shade of red, in the hexagonal, 16-inch form of fireproof, and permanent fast color shingles are adopted so that, for the extended lifetime of the building the entire group will present a neat, harmonious appearance.

The magnitude of the entire task of reconditioning the five buildings can be visualized more clearly by comparison. Last year, the two big jobs involved an expenditure of about $30,000. The five buildings will be overhauled this year will involve about three times that amount.

Specifications on which contractors will base their proposals for this work demand completion in ample time to remove all debris and leave the exposition grounds all spic and span before the opening of the fair August 16. This will require contractors to employ a maximum of men at the peak season of the work.

A wrecking gang of about 200 men will be engaged in removing roofs that can no longer be repaired economically. Then, workmen of the several classes in the building trades will be employed to bring about improvement. In addition the roofing work, there will be considerable glazing, and great quantities of concrete construction.

Exposition Hall requires the greatest amount of expenditure of the five jobs. It will require upward of 600 squares of roofing to recover the building and the covered walk that leads eastward from it. The dome-like super-structure of the building must be practically reconstructed and there will be a big job of painting, inside and out.

The old fine arts building, and Machinery Hall adjoining it, require a vast amount of work. The entire roof of both must be replaced. Plans call for a concrete coping around the top of the art building, and a vast amount sheet metal work and painting. The two structures combined require more than 1200 squares of roofing.

The sheep and hog pavilions will be restored to usefulness by replacing something over 1,500 squares of roofing and a general overhauling of the parts of both structures that are in need of repairs.

The detail work involved in preparing specifications has been performed in the state architect's office, and contractors, invited to enter bids, are impressed with the necessity of speed as the entire task must be completed before the opening of the 1930 exposition -- August 16th.

The Great Commandment:
Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.—Matthew 22:37-40.

Highway Dept. Will Employ Hundreds of Men

During the construction season this year Illinois will employ an average of 1,200 maintenance men and may spend three and a quarter million dollars to repair the ravages of Winter to its system of more than 8,000 miles, Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets announced today.

Through the highway department alone, the state will give employment, direct and indirect, to an estimated 31,000 men during the season, he added.

Because of the severe Winter, the cost of putting the state's roads into shape is expected to run higher than it did last year, when the state spent a total of $2,722,758.30 for maintenance work alone.

Of the $2,722,758.30 spent for maintenance last year, $889,728.31 went for the maintenance of wearing surfaces on all types of surfaced roads and detours. It represented an average of $109.46 per mile.

For the upkeep of the highways, $1,833,029.99 was spent, representing an average expenditure of $255.52 per mile. The average cost per mile for maintenance and upkeep for all types of surfaced roads and detours was $354.98.

For the purpose of keeping an accurate and informative check on maintenance expenditures, the maintenance costs have been divided into these two main divisions, "Maintenance" and "Upkeep". Maintenance includes expenditures for keeping the wearing surface in a usable and presentable condition.

"Upkeep" includes expenditures for filling ruts, erosion in earth shoulders, cleaning culverts painting and repairing bridges, cleaning and clearing ditches and drains, painting, repairing and replacing route markers and safety signs, painting, repairing, and replacing guard fence, cutting and clearing weeds and vegetation, removing rubbish, advertising signs or brush from the right-of-way, removing slides, as well as snow and ice from the pavement.

Of the total miles under maintenance during 1929, 7,285 miles were of Portland cement construction, on which a total of $2,175,532.03 was expended. Of this amount, $507,439.98 was used for the maintenance of the wearing surface, while $1,666,092.05 was required for the upkeep of these roads.

The average cost of maintaining the concrete highways was $69.66 per mile for the year, whereas the average cost per mile for the upkeep of these highways was $288.70.

The condition of state highways in the Spring is possibly worse than during any other season of the year because of the impracticability of doing effective maintenance work in the Winter months.

Who is Responsible?

It is a peculiar trait of human nature that we seldom take action unless goaded by necessity. It is so in regard to the prevention of smallpox and diphtheria — diseases which annually take thousands of lives and leave thousands of handicapped or disfigured victims. We know what causes these diseases and how they are spread. We have for each an absolutely reliable preventive measure, yet until smallpox of a virulent form appears or an epidemic of diphtheria occurs in a community, we neglect to make practical use of the knowledge we have.

For seven successive years, the United States has had more smallpox reported than any other country in the world, with the single exception of India. Last year, more than 100,000 children in the United States suffered from diphtheria. Ten thousand of them died — an average of more than one death for every hour of every day of the year. Coming home to Illinois there were over 4,000 cases of smallpox reported last year — more than were reported in any other state in the Union ad more than among the combined populations of Germany, France, the Netherlands, Belgium, Italy, Poland, Switzerland, the Philippines, and Japan. Last year, there were more cases of diphtheria in Illinois than in any year since 1923.

Children cannot act for themselves in the matter of immunization against disease. Their safeguarding in that respect is one of the obligations of parenthood. Certainly there is no parent today who has not heard of the efficacy of vaccination as a preventive of smallpox. It does not seem probable that any parent today is ignorant of the fact that diphtheria can be prevented by inoculation with toxin-antitoxin. The disease has been wiped out in institutions and communities where immunization has been systematically practiced. If all children between the ages of six months and eight years were protected by toxin-antitoxin diphtheria would disappear within a few years.

The outlook for smallpox and diphtheria in Illinois during 1930 is not encouraging. Unless all signs fail, there will be more smallpox than in 1929. Diphtheria moves in cycles and 1930 is indicated as a peak year.

Has your child been vaccinated? Has he been immunized against diphtheria? If not, have him protected and safeguarded against these two scourges which menace his health and life, and save yourself a great deal of worry — perhaps many regrets. Remember the responsibility for the continuance of smallpox and diphtheria rests on you.

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescription product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

PHILLIPS Milk of Magnesia

Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer of Illinois, has been named one of seven general reporters who will present the questions on the agenda of the Sixth International Road congress to be held in Washington next October. The appointments were announced by Thomas H. MacDonald, secretary-general of the American Organizing commission and chief of the United States bureau of public roads. The agenda includes six questions, one of which has been divided and will be presented by two reporters. Mr. Sheets has been named to discuss results obtained by the use of cement.

With the endorsement of Governor Louis L. Emmerson, who has issued a statement heartily favoring the project, Illinois will celebrate May 12 as hospital day. Announcement made by Dr. Andy Hall, state health director, stated that 353 hospitals and sanatoriums of the state will hold open house to thousands of visitors on that day. In addition to stimulating greater popular appreciation of the great humanitarian services of hospitals in Illinois, the purpose of the day is to commemorate the one hundred twelfth anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale, founder of modern hospital and nursing work. "Hospital day," said Doctor Hall, "is an occasion that should permit the mingling of educational interests with those that promote good cheer and comfort to the sick."

"Greenhouse Pests" is the title of a 112-page illustrated handbook issued by the state natural history survey at Urbana as an aid to florists in the control of insects and other pests that attack ornamental plants and flowers grown under glass in Illinois. The author, C. C. Compton, estimates that the annual damage in the greenhouses of the state averages $3,000,000, or about 15 per cent of the total value of all the crops grown.

Better eggs and better prices for producers are objectives of an egg market improvement campaign to be undertaken by the Illinois department of agriculture and co-operating agencies, according to a communication issued to county farm advisers throughout the state by Stuart E. Pierson, director of agriculture. The department plans, as a feature of the egg campaign, to hold egg-candling demonstrations in every Illinois county. Perry B. McCullough, head of the division of foods and dairies, will co-operate with local dealers in assembling poultry farmers and egg dealers for these demonstrations. "The law," Mr. Pierson explained, "states clearly that the first receiver must candle all the eggs he buys, and place certificates in every case that goes to market. If this were done, the eggs unfit for human food would seldom reach the market to dull the public's appetite for eggs, and thus cut down the price."

Nurses and experts of the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness examined 7,215 school children suspected of having defective vision this year, Miss Audrey H. Hayden, executive secretary, has reported to directors of the organization. Of these, 2,174 students were suffering with impaired vision, of which 246 were corrected to normal and 117 are to receive special education for which the society obtained state appropriations from the legislature last winter. This special education takes the form of sight saving classes. The society has just opened three new classes in the schools of the state and four more are to be started in September, at which time 25 will be in operation. The organization is one of the largest of its kind in the United States and is directed by some of the most prominent men and women in Illinois. Russell Tyson, Chicago philanthropist, is president. Headquarters are at 203 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Building permits issued during March in 45 cities of the state authorized 2,288 building projects with an estimated cost of $9,996,180, says a recent bulletin of the bureau of statistics and research, Illinois department of labor. This marks an increase from the preceding month of 88.3 per cent in the number of buildings contemplated and of 7.8 per cent in valuation, the low additional cost indicating a trend toward smaller projects. Of the estimated total of $9,996,180 to be expended in the 45 reporting cities, 38.3 per cent was for residential building, 44.3 per cent for nonresidential building, and 17.4 for additions, alterations, repairs and installations.

In an address at the convention of the Southern Illinois Editorial association April 18 Gov. Louis L. Emmerson urged the newspaper editors to discuss without party feeling proposed tax amendments to the state constitution that may be adopted if a special session of the legislature is called. "It is not a move to increase taxes," said Governor Emmerson, "but to distribute them fairly, according to the ability to pay. It demands the most earnest consideration at your hands. As creators of public opinion, you can give it nothing less."

An institute on Pan-American relations will be held under the auspices of the Illinois Woman's college at Jacksonville, May 1, 2 and 3. The Jan A. Areson residence hall and college dining hall will be dedicated on the final day of the institute. Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, Francis G. Blair, state superintendent of public instruction, and Bishop Edwin H. Hughes will be the speakers at the dedication ceremonies.

The Mississippi River Park commission, created by the legislature for the purpose of formulating plans for a park system in Illinois along the Mississippi river, held an organization meeting in Springfield and conferred with Director of Public Works H. H. Cleaveland. Jens Jensen, famous landscape architect, whose home is in Ravinia, was selected as chairman of the commission; Miss Mary Davidson, managing editor of the Carthage Republican and a nominee on the Democratic ticket for state representative in the coming elections, was elected vice chairman, and Dr. R. E. Hieronymus of the University of Illinois was named secretary. Although no definite ideas were put forth at the initial meeting, plans for the work will be prepared in time to be presented to the state legislature at its 1931 session.

During the construction season this year, Illinois will employ an average of 1,200 maintenance men, and may spend three and a quarter million dollars to repair the ravages of winter to its highway system of more than 8,000 miles, Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets has announced. Through the highway department alone, the state will give employment, direct and indirect, to an estimated 31,000 men during the season, he added.

A three and one-half ton bell, the gift of the state of Illinois, has been added to the Washington memorial national carillon at Valley Forge. Martin R. Carlson, president pro tempore of the Illinois state senate, representing Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, made the presentation Sunday, April 20. Other speakers included S. O. Anderson of Moline and Mrs. Eli Dixon, Illinois state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The general assembly appropriated $7,500 for the purchase of the bell.

By virtue of a proclamation issued by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, Illinois will place an embargo effective May 15, on cattle suffering from Bang's disease. To enter Illinois from other states after that date, dairy and breeding cattle must be accompanied with certificates from the livestock sanitary officials of the state of origin, to the effect that they have been tested and found free from infectious abortion. The test must have been performed within 30 days of the date of entry.

One of the last orders issued by the Supreme court before adjournment for the April term was one directing Charles W. Vail, clerk of the court, to file the information presented by the Chicago Bar association in an effort to disbar John J. Gorman from the practice of law in Illinois. Gorman, a former member of congress from this state, was Mayor Thompson's chief witness in the Chicago school board trial by which William McAndrew was ousted as superintendent of schools.

Employment in reporting industries of the state declined 1.2 per cent during the period, February 15 to March 15, according to a report of the bureau of statistics and research of the Illinois department of labor. Factory employment decreased by 1.1 per cent, and nonmanufacturing employment by 1.3 per cent. Pay rolls declined 5 per cent; 4.2 per cent for factory workers and 6.5 per cent of nonmanufacturing wage earners. Delay in carrying out the large programs of improvements that are under consideration by both public and private organizations and an apparent holding back of orders are responsible for much of the dullness. While an improvement in industrial conditions is still confidently expected, uncertainty is felt regarding the time at which it will materialize.

Net profits at the rate of $1.40 a hen, or a total of $55,972, were paid during 1929 by hens on 216 Illinois farms whose operators co-operated with the college extension service by keeping accurate flock records, H. H. Alp, poultry extension specialist of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, reports.

Preliminary arrangements were made for the annual reunion of the Dixon College Alumni association, when 11 promoters of the association met with Dr. E. S. Murphy at Dixon. Indications are that a large number will attend the reunion—dates for which are August 15, 16 and 17.

Illinois 1928 per capita tax for the upkeep of the state government was $10.93, according to a report by W. H. McLain, auditor of public accounts for the United States Department of Commerce. The report, made to the state government, covers the year ending June 30, 1928.

The Booklist Books 1929, the tenth annual review of 200 especially useful books selected by 50 librarians, has just made its appearance under the press of the American Library association.

Lesson for May 4

PROMOTION IN THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 20:17-28.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How to Become Great.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Become Great.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Greatness Through Self-Denying Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Standard of Greatness.

1. The King Foretells His Death and Resurrection (vv. 17-19).

1. The King on His way to Jerusalem (v. 17).

This is His last journey to the beloved city. He took the twelve disciples aside from the traveling pilgrims to make known unto them what was before them. As they journeyed, he went ahead of the disciples. The courage thus shown by the Lord amazed the disciples who were following in fear (Mark 10:32).

2. The betrayal and death foretold (vv. 18, 19).

He went forward, fully conscious of the awful tragedy of the cross. He for the third time since the transfiguration tells the disciples of His approaching sufferings and death. But they are so filled with their ambitious schemes that they do not understand Him. The treachery of Judas, the fierce persecutions by the chief priests and scribes, the unjust judgment, the delivery to Pontius Pilate, the mockery, the scourging, the crown of thorns, the cross, the hanging between two malefactors, the nails, the spear—all were spread before His mind like a picture! Though He knew all this, He pressed on, not of necessity, but deliberately. The joyous outlook upon the victory which would be accomplished by the shedding of His blood led Him forward. He went courageously, for He knew the time had come for the accomplishment of His Father's will.

3. The resurrection foretold (v. 19). Truly, this would have been a dark picture had the resurrection not been made known. The resurrection life beyond is always seen as the issue of the cross. The blessedness of the life beyond this "vale of tears" should induce us to press on. Christ is the grand example. (Heb. 12:2).

II. The Ambitious Request of James and John (vv. 20-23).

1. The request (vv. 20, 21). This request was made by their mother. The request was for a place of prominence in the kingdom. It is not wrong for mothers to be ambitious for their boys, but they should know that life's pinnacles are exceedingly dangerous. It is desirable that parents should get places for their children near to Jesus, but the vain ambition of the world should not occupy their minds.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 22, 23).

He spoke directly to the men, not to their mother, declaring that they knew not what they were asking. He showed them that the way to this position of glory was through suffering. The cup which they were to drink was of great agony. The way to the places of glory in the kingdom of Christ is by the path of lowly and self-forgetting service.

III. How to Be Truly Exalted (vv. 24-28).

1. The angry disciples (v. 24). When the ten heard of the request of James and John, they were filled with indignation against them. Their displeasure did not arise from the fact that they were free from the same selfish spirit, but that these two had thrust themselves to the front.

2. Greatness among the heathen (v. 25).

The rule of the world has always been by the strong hand. The standards have not been moral excellence, but worth, station, and power.

3. Greatness among Christ's disciples (vv. 26, 27).

The standard here is in sharp contrast. The way to the place of prominence in Christ's kingdom is the way of self-abasement. To give is greater than to receive. To be serving some one is much better than to be served. There will be degrees of rank in Christ's kingdom, but this rank will be character, not position, or authority. The spirit of Christ substitutes "the greatness of love for the love of greatness."

4. Christ is the supreme example of greatness (v. 28).

All who will be great should study and imitate Christ. Let them forget self and serve others, even to the giving of their lives.

Courage, Unspotted Life

Then said Mr. Holyman, there are two things that they have need to possess who go on pilgrimage: courage and an unspotted life. If they have not courage, they can never hold on their way; and if their lives be loose, they will make the very name of a pilgrim stink.—John Bunyan.

Being Satisfied

To be satisfied with what you have, but never with what you are, means growth and joy.—Young People.

STORY FROM THE START

Returning to America, during the War of 1812, after a successful voyage, Capt. Lion Fellowes' merchant ship Sachem is sunk off Portugal by a British frigate. His crew surrenders, but Fellowes reaches shore exhausted. His life is saved by an English-speaking girl who conceals her identity. He learns from her, however, that she is about to set out for Lisbon. Fellowes goes to Lisbon, hoping to find a vessel America bound. He meets Captain Chater of the American ship True Bounty, an acquaintance. Chater offers him a berth as mate. Fellowes refuses, knowing Chater is disloyal in trading with the enemy. He meets the girl who saved his life, Cara Inglepin, daughter of the owner of the True Bounty. Cara induces him to sail as mate. Fellowes falls in love with her. The True Bounty is stopped by the British frigate, Badger, Captain Collishawe. Despite his American citizenship, Fellowes is taken aboard the Badger as a "pressed" man. Maddened at what he believes is Cara's and Chater's treachery, he strikes Collishawe, who orders him a hundred lashes with the "cat." Fellowes' hatred of the three becomes an obsession.

"I'm Captain Fellowes of New York, whom you cramped out of the True Bounty."

"How's your back?" snapped Collishawe. "Why aren't you on duty?" Fellowes slipped out of the loose pea-jacket he wore, dropping a mass of bandages with the garment, and turned to expose his stripes to the Englishman's inspection.

"You ought to see it," he said. "You might like to describe it to Miss Inglepin, when you go to smoke your pipe in her father's garden."

Collishawe's cheeks whitened.

"No occasion for this exhibition—or for your insolence. You were flogged for striking your commander—you should have been hung; I made allowance for your excited condition." He hesitated. "It ought not to be necessary to have to tell you that the lady you mention was in no way responsible for your being pressed. If you're a gentleman—"

"But I'm not," objected Fellowes. "I'm a common sailor. I've been flogged to convince me of it—one hundred lashes of the cat."

Collishawe rubbed his chin, embarrassed, apparently at a loss.

"See here," he exclaimed impulsively. "I'm d—d sorry this happened. You acted most foolishly, but I wouldn't have ordered the cat if there'd been any way out of the mess you got yourself into."

"Oh, d—n you and your sympathy," Fellowes answered, gently venomous. "And d—n your lies. I know what you are up to. I know what Miss Inglepin is up to. You aren't fooling me."

The Englishman stared at him coldly.

"That will do," he rasped. "Go below. And if you insult me again I'll send you to the brig in strict confinement. (Clink!)"

"Aye, aye, sir!"

"Escort this man to his berth. He's not to come on deck unless he conducts himself in accordance with discipline."

"Aye, aye, sir!" The bosun was flustered. And as soon as they were out of earshot of Collishawe: "Wot 'ave I been atellin' ye? Want to get that back out up again? Only that the cap'n's kindly ye'd be stripped at the mast this morn'."

Fellowes sobered.

"I hate him. I think I hate him more every day. I hate him for what he did to me. I hate him for being sorry he did it. I hate him—Oh, I just hate him. D'you understand, Clinch? I hate him! Whatever he does, I hate him!"

"Tain't Christian, lad," rebuked the bosun. "Tain't nowise Christian. Now, 'ere's yer berth. Lie down, and rest up a piece. Likely ye'll get some o' that hate out o' ye, then."

"No, Bob," Fellowes answered wearily. "It's a part of me. It won't come out."

CHAPTER V

Escape

Plying her regular patrol well to seaward of Sandy Hook, the Badger was the vidette of the New York squadron, always on outpost.

One of the first things Fellowes discovered was that the blockaders were in constant communication with the shore. At night sloops and peraguers would steal out from the Jersey coves or the Rockaway inlets, with fresh meats and vegetables—and information that was much more valuable. Well-dressed gentry would climb aboard the sloop-of-war, hats pulled low over their eyes, and be escorted to the cabin, where they talked into the small hours.

Obviously, Ben Inglepin's daughter was not singular in her disloyalty: the country seethed with factional strife as in the days of the Revolution. There must be many Americans who hated Madison worse than the stupid Prince Regent—Americans who would wreck their country, procure its defeat, sacrifice a measure of its independence, rather than see the Democratic administration triumph.

Fellowes regarded the intercourse between the blockaders and the shore as encouraging for his plans to escape. He was certain the tide of treason was flowing unchecked. The continuing visits of the contraband traders were sufficient proof, and the news that percolated from them through all ranks indicated how disastrously the national effort was being crippled by political jealousy and incapacity.

But he waited with unabated confidence. His back was entirely healed and he was glad to do his share of hard, physical labor. Work helped to dull the carking itch of humiliation. Collishawe ignored him, and he avoided Collishawe as much as he could.

With the crew he was, if not popular, respected. But then any man would have been respected aboard the Badger, who could boast the friendship of Bob Clinch and Cuffee Cockroach. Clinch was all-powerful for'ard, and no sailor would have dared to risk the giant negro's wrath. The nigger, men said, fought with 'is teeth; he'd eat yer alive, if 'e got primed.

One July morning the Badger left her consorts off the Hook, hauled her wind and stood to the northwest on long, reaching tacks, and Fellowes' eye glinted expectantly when she closed a low, sandy shore that afternoon, and dropped her anchor outside the line of breakers. The hunger in his face drew Cuffee to him.

Fellowes caught the negro by the arm.

"That's mine, Cuffee! That's my land!"

In his excitement he had raised his voice slightly, and Tom grogan rolled across the deck.

"Easy all, messmate!" advised Tom. "No need to git yer dander rizzed up. These landin' parties is reg'lar divarsons on the blockade."

"Landin' parties?" exclaimed Fellowes. "Who told you a party was going ashore?"

"Nobody, but I seed Clinch afussin' with the long boat, and we ain't anchored here for to rest our spars."

Fellowes glanced aft to where the longboat lay on its chocks. Bob Clinch was bending over it. As Fellowes watched him, he straightened and strolled for'ard.

"Oh, Bob," called Fellowes. "What's this I hear about a landing party?"

"Cap'n's orders. Dark o' the moon. Ye see," Clinch winked mysteriously. "Fine time to raid 'enroosts."

"Is that what you're after?"

There was disappointment in Fellowes' voice.

"Ow should I know, lad? The cap'n ain't give me 'is confedance. All 'e says is: 'Bosun, landin' party tonight. Overhaul the longboat and pick me twenty good men. Pistols 'n cutlasses. Ye'll go with me.'"

"He's going, himself?" Fellowes asked eagerly.

"Aye, aye, lad. That's 'ow I understand it."

Clinch stumped off, and Fellowes fixed his gaze again on the shore that was so near, and so unattainable. He had been right. Cara Inglepin's treason was bearing fruit. Tonight, perhaps, it would flower. And he was helpless to interfere!

He groaned, and Tom inquired anxiously:

"Ye ain't goin' to be silly, 'n fret 'cause ye can't go in the longboat?"

"Dat him land," spoke up Cuffee.

"Dat him home whar he lib."

"Not my home, 'Cuffee," denied Fellowes. "That's Fire Island, the Great South beach. My home is across the Great South bay beyond it—at Babylon, where the landing party are going."

"Who tole ye that?" demanded Tom. "I'm as positive as I can be," the Long Islander concluded. "Collishawe, himself wouldn't go with an ordinary raiding party. No, he is going to meet her—Miss Inglepin—a cold note of passion rang in his voice as he spoke the name—and her father. At Chater's farm, of course. They must have something for him, political or military information—and if we could only get there in time we might raise the militia, and trap them all!"

"Mebbe so we swim fo' sho'," suggested Cuffee. "Cuffee him Krooboy. All Krooboy swim plenty. Cuffee swim fo' beach, pull yo' wid him."

Started and doubtful, Fellowes surveyed the expanse of restless blue water and the smother of breakers.

"It would be a hard swim, Cuffee," he objected. "I can swim a little, but—"

"I can't," grunted Tom.

"Cuffee pull yo' bofe," grinned the negro. "Dat easy fo' Cuffee."

"Foolishness," grumbled Tom. "We must make a try for it, Tom. If you won't come—"

"Cuffee no let yo' drown," promised the negro.

"We'll stand by you, if you'll stand by us," Fellowes pleaded earnestly. "But we must make a try for the shore. We may never have another opportunity. Why, we'd deserve to be flogged, if we didn't go!"

Tom spat disgustedly.

"Oh, I'll go," he agreed. "Flogged or drowned, it's all one."

Despite himself, Fellowes was unable to keep his eyes off Collishawe, methodically concerned with preparations for the longboat's expedition.

An undercurrent of excitement pervaded the crew. Each of the men selected to go was surrounded by a knot of friends, and Bob Clinch was trailed along the deck by sailors, who hoped to be chosen at the last moment.

Mr. Curry and the other officers were hurrying about their various duties; the gunner was inspecting pistol-flints, and packing bags of grape-shot for the light three-pounder which squatted in the longboat's bow. Only Collishawe remained phlegmatic and undisturbed.

Watching Collishawe, fury slowly welled in Fellowes' heart. He pondered the thoughts which occupied Collishawe, tried to plumb the secrets concealed behind the Englishman's hawk-nosed face.

Battle lanterns shed gout of yellow radiance on the deck, and the longboat's company followed their captain down the Jacob's ladder, Clinch tugging them off at the gangway. Oars rattled in the thole-pins. "That you Clinch? Take the tiller. Give way men."

Fellowes stole for'ard. Men were dowsing the extra lights. A pair of ship's boys were sparring by the main hatch, egged on by a circle of sailors. The confusion of the longboat's departure hadn't quite died down.

"Cuffee!" whispered Fellowes.

"Yah, mars'r." The negro rose from the windlass. "Tom been under bow-sprit heel."

"Good! We must go quickly."

They slipped over the catheads into the water that rippled purringly about the bow. Tom muffled a groan.

"Drown me, ye will," he murmured dismally.

"Cuffee no let yo' drown," returned the negro, placing one of Tom's hands on his shoulder. "Hol' on dar."

And he vanished in the darkness with the celerity of a fish, towing Tom's floundering bulk as easily as though his companion was a lump of cork. Fellowes pursued at a more moderate pace. He couldn't see twenty feet beyond his nose; the Badger was a vague huddle of spars, in a few strokes more became invisible. He traced Cuffee's progress by Tom's puffings and snortings. It was easy, he told himself, driving ahead, hand over hand, legs kicking rhythmically. Ah, but not so easy, he discovered soon, as the little waves kept slapping at his face, and his limbs grew heavier and heavier.

Vegetables Enjoyed by Epicures of Old Times

The beets of ancient Greece were black and white and the leaves as well as the roots were used. The leaves were generally preferred to lettuce, though lettuce was highly thought of for its cooling effect.

There are accounts of lettuce being served in its natural state at the tables of Persian kings as far back as 500 B. C. The Romans generally cooked it. Roman lettuce was black and its milky juice was said to induce sleep. In sixteenth century England, where eight varieties were found, it was cooked or served with oil and vinegar.

Only in recent years have mushrooms been anything like abundant on the market, and outside the large cities they are considered a rarity still; yet mushrooms have been available for thousands of years. Said Pliny: "The last device of our epicures to sharpen their appetites and tempt them to eat inordinately is the cooking of mushrooms."

Often they prepared the dish with their own hands to enjoy the odor. The mushroom, however, fell into discredit at the death of Emperor Tiberius Claudius, on account of the aid it had rendered Agrippina, his wife, in poisoning him.

Naval Academy Custom

Above the altar of the United States Naval Academy chapel is one of the most exquisite windows in America. It is of singular beauty in lines and coloring and portrays the Savior walking on the water. His figure being one of remarkable tenderness and majesty. One of the traditions of service in the chapel is that each official service shall end with the hymn "Eternal Father, Strong to Save."

GIVE NEW LINES TO PRINT FROCK; TWEED FROM HAT TO HEMLINE

WITH entirely new silhouettes, with soft feminizing bows, with graceful and novel peplums (see picture), with myriads of capelets, with sprightly prints galore, thus does fashion continue to vamp us. For a fact, never, at least not in the memory of most of us, have the wiles of the mode proved so irresistible.

Take it in the matter of the perfectly charming little print silk frocks which are gladdening the whole spring-time landscape with their presence, white or light backgrounds. The new printed taffetas are amazingly chic, and the dainty printed cotton nets are ever so lovely.

Tweed for Spring.

Add tweed to tweed, and what's the answer? According to that which leading stylists are telling us over and over again this season, the sum total is nothing less than outstanding chic for the costume. The models in the lower picture declare just that—the voguishness of really, now, who can think of any woman of her acquaintance who has not yielded to the lure of at least one, if not a half-dozen more or less of these adorable fantasies?

To milady who is thinking of adding yet another print to her collection, the winsome frock in the picture is sure to prove an inspiration. The print crepe of which this dress is made intermingles the loveliest yellows and capucine shades and browns on a creamy beige background. Being thoroughly style-conscious, the young woman wears with this delightful frock brown kid pumps and a brown felt hat. To be correctly costumed, one's footwear and headwear simply must enter into the color scheme, which accounts for the conspicuous display of colorful kid shoes in all leading booteries this season. Likewise, the new straws take on the colors of the rainbow, as do the new felts, for the felts are still smart, that is if they are worn during the practical and sports hours of the day.

Returning to the subject of prints, it is interesting to note how certain the ensemble made of handsome tweed from hat to hemline. For that matter some of the very smartest tweed costumes go so far as to include shoes and handbag of matching tweed.

One reason that fashionists are inspired to work tweed for all it is worth this spring is that the light-weightness, the sheerness and the "springy" colors of the new tweeds, make these weaves eminently practical and wearable at the immediate moment; in fact the costume ideal for sports, motoring, town wear and country club during the coming months will be most often interpreted in lacy tweeds.

The swanky sports ensemble to the right in the picture (Laura La Plante, the pretty blond actress of cinema fame, posing) is fashioned of a gray and green tweed mixture. The one-piece dress is made with a square neck. In creating the hat, frock and jacket of the same, the designer of this costume multiplies the modishness of grayish-green tweed by three.

The other charming ensemble, which is of beige tweed, arrived just recently types are worn at certain hours of the day or for certain occasions. For instance, the little dark yet gay prints of the character in the picture are considered the correct thing for practical utilitarian wear. In this genre the new pin-dots should also be classed. By the way, if you possess not some one thing or another of pin-dotted material this season, say a coat, or a blouse, a frock suit or ensemble—well, then you are certainly losing out in the game of fashion.

When it comes to dressy and formal evening modes, prints make a sudden change, taking on patternings—big, bold and vivid, very frequently on from Paris. So it is not only the American woman who has become tweed-minded, for la Parisienne is wearing tweed this spring with equal enthusiasm. The designer, in this instance, carries the tweed idea throughout the costume in that the hat is of the identical tweed of the jacket-suit; also the jersey blouse is tweed-trimmed.

Favor for black-and-white tweed is expressed to no little extent in smart circles. It is considered the height of fashion to wear with these black-and-white suits of tweed black and white kid footwear.

Six Easy Shots and No

"Bag," Is Hunter's Wail

The latest tale of hunter's luck, or, rather, lack of it, is that a deer hunter from Holyoke ensconced himself comfortably in the corner of a fence near the King place in Montgomery. After waiting about half an hour, he observed a fine buck slowly coming along the path toward him. He waited until the animal was six rods away and shot at him.

The deer was somewhat puzzled by the sound and turned his broadside to the hunter, who shot a second time, missing the deer completely. The buck immediately vanished and the hunter, cursing his luck, sat still.

A few minutes later a large doe came on the track of the buck, and stood in the same spot. The hunter took the now customary two shots, missed both times, and the doe went on.

An hour later he went to a small brook nearby for a drink and on rising from the ground saw a second buck facing him. Two shots had become a habit of his and he took them, missing both times.

He returned to the Paper city, and it is wagged he did not boast of the wonders of nature and of how beautiful animal life is.—Springfield Union.
